

A friend never forgotten

Death, a black rose silhouetted on white washed wall.
Petals wilting cruppled in the dirt
like the tears I cried for you.
Now you are but a happy childhood memory,
Forgotten by the sands of time.

By Henry Towersey